

TRAGIC TALE OF SEAS UNFOLDED

Captain and First Mate Crushed to Death? 4 Held For Mutiny.

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 17.—A tragic tale of the sea was unfolded here Thursday by four survivors of the British schooner Onia, picked up while drifting helplessly several hundred miles from shore by the American steamship Mirkel. The survivors, all from New Foundland, say the captain of the Onia, James Brubaker, and his brother, Robert, first mate, were crushed to death by the shifting of the ship's cargo in a gale.

Their stories, however, do not agree with that told by Capt. Daniel A. Sullivan, master of the Mirkel, which arrived here Thursday, and all four men were locked up at the Gloucester immigration station on charges of mutiny. They will be turned over to the British consul.

Capt. Sullivan declared that when he drew near the schooner he plainly could see what appeared to be a general fight raging on the little craft's deck amidships and that one of his officers said he had heard what he believed to be two pistol shots.

The Onia, a 165-ton schooner, was bound for a New Foundland port from Oporto, Spain, with a cargo of salt.

Beauty Chats By Edna Kent Forbes

The Value Of Foot Baths.

TO me, a bath is the sovereign remedy for all ills. This Chat may be quite personal, for what I want to do is to tell some of the baths I have found effective for various troubles.

When tired, I take a hot bath, and soak in the hot water till I feel decidedly warmed and relaxed. Then I roll up in a blanket and lie down for as long a period as I dare. When nervous and done out, I take a strong salt bath, hot or cold, according to the weather, and never fail to find refreshment. When I feel a cold coming on, I take an extra hot bath with a lot of mustard in the water, roll up in a lot of blankets and go to sleep.

Ordinarily, I find a hot bath with soap and a hot rinse followed by a cold one, both cleansing and stimulating. At other times I may prefer herb baths, such as in a white bath with bags of oatmeal instead of soap and a wash cloth, but the war and the subsequent shortage of all cereals broke me of this habit, so I take very few of these, which warm and soothe the skin.

And when I've no time for a full bath, I find a foot bath an excellent substitute. And so will you. Simply sit with feet in a basin filled with hot water—salt water if you like, and let the tired feet and ankles soak as long as you can. Rinse with cold water and rub vigorously with a coarse Turkish towel and dust with powder. Then, a quick pedicure, filing off the callouses and clipping the nails. Rest the feet as much as possible after this by sitting down to your dressing or your work, and wear low heeled house slippers all you have to go out again.

Questions and Answers.

Q.—Why do you think the doors of opportunity are closed to the older woman? I wish I had space to tell you the number of them I know, who, like you, have been forced to earn their living after they have raised a family. You say you know nothing but how to keep house—and you could do nothing but run a boarding house. But think how daintily, how charmingly you can do that, and how that such places are needed for the poor unfortunate ones who must buy their homes at so much per week! The owner of two boarding houses and a restaurant in New York began as a simple boarding house keeper.

Bedtime Stories For The Little Ones

UNCLE WIGGLY AND THE SKUDDELMAGOON.

OUT in the kitchen of the hollow was something like the Pipsenwah, only worse.

"Did you come for my supper?" Uncle Wiggly inquired, sort of diffident like and evasively.

"Night!" snorted the Skuddelmagoon. "I want some supper for my supper!" But what are you doing with an spoon on, and a lot of water and dishes in the sink?"

"I'm helping Nurse Jane, so she will be able to go to the moving pictures with me," answered the bony rabbit gentleman. "I'm washing the dishes, and if you want to help me, why you may."

"Oh, ho!" howled the Skuddelmagoon. "Maybe you think if I do that I'll forget about your supper?"

Uncle Wiggly did not answer. "But I will not forget!" howled the Skuddelmagoon. "I'll help you wash the dishes, but after they are done I'll have all the supper I want! And if you haven't enough I'll take some of Nurse Jane's."

"Oh, that will be dreadful!" thought Uncle Wiggly. "I wonder what I can do to drive him away!" and the bunny was so excited that he squeezed the cake of soap too hard and it popped into the dishpan full of water with a splash.

"What was that?" asked the Skuddelmagoon.

"A cake of soap!" answered Uncle Wiggly.

New the Skuddelmagoon was a little hard of hearing and he thought Uncle Wiggly said "A cake—I hope!" But the bunny had really said "Cake of soap."

"Oh, but cake, ah!" cried the Skuddelmagoon. "Well, let me have that. I'll see what kind of cake it is before I eat your supper. I like cake!"

Uncle Wiggly fished the cake of soap out of the dishwater. The soap was very wet and—well, you know how soap is!—it slipped from his hand and it popped into the kitchen leaving a slimy trail behind.

"Oh, but you are a lively piece of cake," cried the Skuddelmagoon. "You think you'll get away from me, do you? Well, I'll show you!"

He gave a big jump, thinking to jump on the cake of soap and he did. He landed right on it.

"What? Whizz! Whizz!" went the Skuddelmagoon's feet out from under him, and down he came "ker-bunk!" on the floor. And he fell right on the cake of soap, which had made it very slippery, and out of the door he slid, down the steps, bumpity-bump, landing on his nose.

"Oh, woe!" cried the Skuddelmagoon, as he limped away. "No more cake for me! Next time I'll take pie!"

So he didn't get Uncle Wiggly at all, and soon the bunny picked up the slippery cake of soap by sticking a fork in it, and he finished the dish and he and Nurse Jane went to the movies and liked them very much.

And if the strawberry jam doesn't get rid in the face when you sneeze, ask it to dance with the bread and butter. I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggly and the bird grapes. (Copyright, 1915, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Gas and wind in the stomach accompanied by that flat, bloated feeling after eating are common signs of the presence of excessive hydrochloric acid in the stomach, creating so-called "acid indigestion."

Add stomachs are dangerous because too much acid irritates the delicate lining of the stomach, often leads to gastritis, accompanied by serious stomach aches, food fermenting and making, causing the distressing gas which distends the stomach and impairs the normal functions of the vital internal organs, often affecting the heart.

It is the worst of folly to neglect such a simple condition or to treat with ordinary directions a case which has no securing effect on the stomach acids. Instead get from "Dr. Cassell's" a safe course of Bismuth Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This will drive the gas, wind and flat right out of the body, soothe the stomach, neutralize the excess acid and prevent its irritation and there is no surprise or pain. Bismuth Magnesia is the best of all stomach remedies. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.—Adv.

Reports from Dallas tell of ex-Rev. Hogg's illness. It is reported that he was worst last night. The physicians operated for dropsy. They decline to say anything except that his condition is serious.

Amelia Lavario, aged 3 years, was hit and knocked down by an automobile driven by C. A. Johnson at the corner of Shannon and San Antonio streets today.

Gen. Benjamin Franklin Hawkes, veteran of three wars, arrived in El Paso last night en route to his home at Washington, D. C. from the Pacific coast. He was accompanied by his wife.

The American Mining Congress, which meets in El Paso November 14 to 15, is the cause of much planning. A throng of visitors is expected in the city at this time. A rock drilling contest among other things has been planned. Substantial prizes have been offered.

Dr. A. T. Turner and R. L. Ramsey have been appointed associate surgeons for the Southern Pacific.

All Rock Island trains from the east are late today because of a freight wreck east of Delhart, Texas.

Miss H. F. Reid, assistant to the president of the Bush Terminal company, in New York, and vice president of all the subsidiary companies of the concern, is said to be the highest paid woman business executive in the world.
